The Words of Eternal Life - 41

"Everyone then who hears these words of mine and does them will be like a wise man who built his house upon the rocks; and the rain fell and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house, but it did not fall because it had been founded on the rocks."
(Mt. 7:24-25)

Meditations . . .

“Whatever town you enter and they welcome you . . .”

(Luke 10:8)

Imagine that you’re one of the disciples. You enter a small town, stand in the marketplace, and proclaim, “The kingdom of God is at hand for you” (Luke 10:9). How do you think the villagers would react? Would they be excited and want to hear more? Would they ignore you? Or would they laugh and run you out of town?

In today’s Gospel, Jesus speaks to the seventy-two disciples he has chosen for a preaching mission. He wants to give them realistic expectations: the people they would visit might welcome their message—but they also might reject it. He tells them that they are to proclaim the good news, but the outcome of their preaching is out of their hands. And what an outcome it was! Even demons submitted to them (Luke 10:17)!

In the same way, we don’t know how people will react when we try to share our faith. So we tend to overthink things: Will they be open to listening to my message? Or will they politely dismiss me and say that they are not interested? But whatever the case, our decision to tell people about God’s kingdom shouldn’t be based on how we think they’ll respond. Our responsibility is simply to extend an invitation.

Even when it seems that someone has rejected our message, we can’t see into the future. Years later, someone may turn to Christ because they recalled something we said to them about our love for the Lord. Something similar may have happened to the townspeople who initially rejected the disciples’ message. Perhaps later, when they heard the news that Jesus had risen from the dead, they remembered the disciples’ visit and came to believe in him.

So lay aside any discouragement you might feel if you don’t see your efforts bearing fruit. Whatever happens, rejoice that you have done what God has called you to do and that your name, too, is written in heaven (Luke 10:20)!

“Jesus, help me to do my part and entrust the rest to you!”

The Fruits of Repentance (Part 3):

“God wants to do so much more than forgive us.”

Repentance also gives us a taste of the kind of restoration that the prodigal son felt when he came home. He was weary, grimy, and smelly from his misadventures, but his father immediately embraced him and sought to restore him. All the articles that he gave his son—a ring, sandals, and a robe—were signs of dignity and belonging. They were meant to show the boy that he had indeed come home, where he could finally find rest and acceptance. And this is exactly what God does for us every time we return to him in repentance. He restores our sense of dignity and reassures us that we are completely forgiven.

When the prodigal returned home, he likely faced a number of challenges: the challenge to change his behavior and expectations of life, the challenge to allow his wounded memories to be healed, even the challenge to be reconciled with his older brother. But perhaps the biggest challenge had nothing to do with the past but with the future: the challenge to "bear fruit worthy of repentance" (Matthew 3:8). In other words, full restoration includes the restoration of a person's calling as well as the restoration of his dignity and his relationships. When God forgives us, he wants to assure us that our sins are forgotten, but he also wants to reassure us that we can still bear wonderful fruit.

Opportunities for Repentance. So how do we get free? We can summarize repentance into four simple steps we can take. First, we can begin by admitting to the Lord that we have dishonored him and that our only hope is in his mercy. Second, we should examine our hearts and actions during the day and try to make a list of the sins we recall. Third, we should confess these sins clearly to the Lord, trusting that if we do so, "he who is faithful and just will forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9). Finally, we should not forget to forgive those who have hurt us during the day. Of course, some hurts simply take more time to heal than others, but every day we can take another step toward fully forgiving so that we can know God's forgiveness as fully as possible. (to be continued)
